Section Descriptions

Pacing guide - Pacing guides are timelines showing content to cover at specific points over the course of a year. This includes all the information needed for teachers to draft lesson plans. Includes items for a particular unit such as:

- academic vocabulary lists
- common assessments
- connections to district adopted curriculum resources
- essential questions
- content standards and indicators
- critical content and skills

Standards, strands and indicators – These are concise, written descriptions of what students are expected to know and can do within the course. Generally, standards are first adopted by the state and then the Omaha Public Schools Board of Education adopts the final versions used for the courses.

Scope and sequence - Scope is the material or skills to be taught, and sequence is the order in which you teach the information. This is brief and is used as an overview of the progression of learning (e.g. K-5, 6-8, 9-12).

Proficiency Scales/Proficiency Level Descriptors - Proficiency scales or descriptors are written for a content standard or concept. They define what students should know and can do for each level of learning.

Academic Vocabulary List with Definitions – This list includes the terms that should be taught using the Marzano 6-Step Vocabulary Process and has the appropriate definitions to terms listed here. There should be approximately 90 terms per course/grade level content area for the year. Additional content specific vocabulary is listed within the Pacing Guide.

District Adopted Resources – This lists the core materials (textbooks, web resources, and supplemental materials) selected for the course as approved by the Omaha Public Schools Board of Education.

Unit 1: Creation and Structures of Democratic Government

Unit Overview: At its core, the Constitution lays out that the sovereignty of the United States is derived from its people and that the government’s authority is limited. It seeks to protect individual freedom, while promoting equality, maintaining order, and offering opportunity for all within its borders. By replacing the Articles of Confederation, the framers validated the need for a stronger central government in order insure stability. In creating three co-equal branches to the new government, they insured that each branch checks the authority of one another. Power is to be split between the Federal, state, and local levels to maximize the participation of the electorate, which leads to contentious debate as to the authority of jurisdictions. Your voice matters; be it through the vote, petitioning the government, running for office, or protest. How does the Constitution protect your ability to engage in and with your government? How has the Constitution adapted to an ever-changing national landscape?

Unit Two: Three Branches of Government

Unit Overview: In a democracy, part of the government’s role is to provide for the general welfare of those living within its borders. Elected officials must determine what is needed for the common good. The three branches of government - legislative, executive, and judicial - operate at the federal, state, and local level. They provide resources (often in the form of money, services, as well with the Bureaucracy, at all to help the country function. In this unit we will evaluate the role of each of the three branches independently, and as a whole, to determine how our system of checks and balances operates. The overarching question this unit is asking is: How do people living in the United States influence and engage with the various branches of government?

Unit Three: Civic Participation

Unit Overview: A vibrant democracy is one in which the highest number of individuals are actively engaged. What does that participation look like? Voting and becoming educated on candidates is extremely important, but is that the only way to effect change? Protesting, signing petitions, contacting representatives, and running for office are methods to participate as well. Political parties provide a link to the political process and create a sense of community based on ideology. Are the two parties enough to represent such a diverse nation? Interest groups and political action committees also serve as linkage institutions, allowing members to turn individual advocacy into collective action. Do these groups hold too much influence in today's political environment? These are questions that the next generation of active citizens is going to have to answer. However you choose to participate in the process, your engagement helps democracy thrive. This unit proposes some ways to get involved.

Unit 4: Government Policy

Unit Overview: Have you ever wondered how you can make a difference in the world you live in? Public policy compels change in a democracy. Public policy is created by government institutions, interest groups, PACS, political parties, media, and individuals in society. Public policy drives the lawmaking process. Public policy changes overtime and various government institutions have the responsibility to respond to the change. In this unit, you will study how public policy and the key components of lawmaking relate as well as the role of various political institutions.

Course Standards Overview

Standards: At the highest level of generality, content area standards include a set of broad, overarching content-based statements that describe the basic cognitive, affective, or psychomotor expectations of students. They reflect long-term goals for learning. These comprehensive statements are not grade level specific and cover the big ideas of the course.

Indicators: Under each standard are indicators, which further describe what a student must know and be able to do to meet the standard. Indicators are performance, based statements that provide educators with a clear understanding of the expected level of student learning and guidance. Indicators provide guidance for an assessment of student learning. Indicators also help to distinguish expectations between grade levels.

Nebraska Department of Education Content Area Standards Reference Guide:

Organization and Structure of Nebraska’s Social Studies Standards The overall structure of Nebraska’s Social Studies Standards reflects the two-tier structure common across all Nebraska content area standards. The two levels include standards and indicators. At the broadest level, standards include broad, overarching content-based statements that describe the basic cognitive, affective, or psychomotor expectations of student learning. The standards, across all grade levels, reflect long-term goals for learning. Indicators further describe what students must know and be able to do to meet the standard and provide guidance related to classroom instruction. Additionally, the indicators provide guidance related to the assessment of student learning. In addition to standards and indicators, the Nebraska Social Studies standards provide examples. The “For example...” statements provide guidance relative to topics that may be included in the locally determined curriculum. These suggestions may be used to meet the learning expectations of the standards and indicators. For grades K-8, the standards and indicators are written at grade level. The K-8 standards and indicators are organized within four disciplines: Civics, Economics, Geography, and History. Within those disciplines, standards and indicators are grouped by big ideas. Big ideas are concepts, themes, or issues that give meaning and connection to facts and skills (Wiggins and McTighe, 2005, p. 5). The high school standards and indicators are written within one grade band (HS = 9-12), and they are also organized by discipline and big ideas. Prior to each grade level and the high school grade band, a summary statement and theme are included. This provides a high-level overview of what students are expected to learn at that grade level. In addition to a common structure for content area standards, a consistent numbering system is used for content area standards. (Source: Nebraska Social Studies Standards, 2019)

Use of Video in Instruction

The use of video (i.e., DVDs, videotapes, streaming video, YouTube, etc.), when used to judiciously, can effectively promote student learning in the classroom. Brain research shows that students in grades K-7 can generally attend to instruction for 5-12 minutes while older adolescents can attend for approximately 12-15 minutes before their attention lags (Jensen, 1998). Researchers have suggested that students' focus wanes after 10 minutes of passive viewing of videos (Adams and Hamm, 2001). So, while videos can enrich educational experiences, educators must be conscious of time constraints on a student's ability to attend and process visual media (Schulz, 2006).

When using video, district best practices must be considered and all of the following conditions must be met:

- Copyright laws must always be followed.
- Video may not be used during instructional time for the purpose of entertainment, incentives, or reward. This is a copyright violation.
- The video must be previewed by the instructor prior to classroom use.
- Video that is used in a lesson should be documented in the lesson plan.
- Excerpts should be generally used along with activities requiring active student involvement such as discussion or analysis of the media.
- Complete videos that last more than one instructional period should be used only if they are approved as part of an established curriculum. These resources should be written into curriculum guides and/or maintained by the content area supervisor. A public performance license is required when showing video for entertainment purposes and is permitted only during non-instructional time (i.e. after school, during recess, movie nights, etc.) Movie Licensing USA www.movlic.com/ provides public performance license for schools.
